

Con Corazón Outreach Report

28th November 2023 – Marampaqui

Good personal hygiene helps avoid getting sick and spreading germs. Washing your hands frequently is a good way to prevent germs on your hands from making you sick. Bathing or showering often helps prevent infections in the body.

However, this is not a very common practice for the inhabitants of Marampaqui, since for various reasons they did not receive adequate guidance on this issue. On a regular basis, we teach parents that this habit is acquired by them first so that their children can imitate them. We also teach them that poor hygiene has consequences for the health of the individual and the family.

More and more, people who listen to preventive health talks acquire more information and apply it in their daily lives. This encourages us to continue with these activities due to the positive response we have received.
